LEGAL ISSUES
IN EDUCATION

Legal issues...from a teacher's perspective.

Not Your Typical Legal Lecture

We've all been in that lecture on school law. You know the one I'm talking about...the one where you zoned out long before it was over. The presentations I provide aren't what you're used to because I've been where you've been—in the classroom! With useful and engaging information, we will explore the legal issues that affect teachers on a daily basis in a variety of areas.

Participants can expect to do more than just sit and pass the time. My presentations are designed for audience input and participation to keep them engaged and focused on information that is relevant. It's time for you to walk out of a school law lecture feeling like you've gained something instead of losing valuable time.

Jeremy's Story

I am a native of Crossville, TN and currently lives in my wife's (Kristi) hometown of Carthage, TN. Together we have two girls: Makenna and Ainsley.

I started my career as an educator after graduating from Tennessee Technological University with a Bachelor of Science in Secondary Education. I later earned my Master of Arts in Instructional Leadership from Tennessee Tech as well. During my time as a teacher, I taught 8th-12th grade social studies classes both in the classroom and in an on-line environment. I also spent time as a Special Education one-on-one assistant and teacher. I worked a number of years assisting high school marching bands as a drum major coach, assistant director, and a semester as the interim-director.

After teaching for a while, I decided to go back to school and chose to attend the Nashville School of Law. Upon graduation, I was awarded the Founder's Award for obtaining the highest GPA in my graduating class. I now work in private practice and am constantly seeking ways to blend my two careers: teaching and law.
